Project B Design Thoughts

Questions to think about:

1. What is the purpose of your website?
 - The purpose of my website will be to get my message across to any reader. This includes providing information and images that flow together to form a cohesive "story".
2. Who will be the users of your site?
 - The users of the site will include any family and friends, but most importantly future employers or clients. I want a future employer/ client to visit the site and learn about who I am and what I could offer to their company or have them see my ability to meet their goals.
3. What content will you need on your website?
 - I will need plenty of content about myself, perhaps a little personal background as well as my educational background. Also, I can feature other opportunities to show where I have worked in the past and how I provided for that company. Maybe I will include a section about where I am today, and likely going in the future.
4. What imagery, videos, and/or audio will be needed?
 - I doubt I will use many videos or audio. I might add a video of some hobbies or something similar, but it will mostly be images. Images to show about myself as well as to enhance the overall design of the site.
5. What content is needed on those pages?
 - This question goes hand in hand with the content of the site. Pages will need to be all about specific sections of the content. For example here could be some pages:
 - Personal life: featuring content about where I grew up and hobbies I like now
 - Educational and work background: featuring content on previous jobs, the degrees I'm working towards, etc.
 - Future goals: featuring content on where I see myself in the future
6. What goal do you want users to achieve when visiting this site?
 - I want to have a site that will feature myself and then be able to refer to it when someone wants to learn more! It can also be a place to summarize everything important for an employer to get an idea of how I would fit into their company, or how a client would feel about hiring me to do a project for them.
7. Are you going to do a personal website or a music artist website?
 - This will be a personal website.
